propellant in these guns means that the seals are the their weak spot. There are number of things the users should do to keep those seals intact Always put a drop of Pellgunoil or Silicon oil on every 4th canister that you are putting into your rifle. We recommend Silicon oil as it can be used across various air guns, whereas Pellgunoil is combustible and can be used only in CO2 air rifles. Do not leave a CO2 canister in you Crosman 1077 for more than 2 hours, not to mention overnight. If you made less than 40 shots from a single CO2 cartridge unscrew the gas tube endcap in a measured pace to allow for a slow release of CO2 from that cartridge. Quick release of CO2 will result in rapid temperature drop and will ruin you seals in no time. Now, if despite of all your efforts your Crosman 1077 still ended up with a gas leak in most cases you can fix it yourself. The most common gas leak that your little rifle can end up with is at the piercing valve. If all your CO2 expels in one go as soon as you tighten your gas tube cap and your rifle spits icecubes from under the stock, you definitely have a problem with your piercing valve seal and it needs replacement. Here is what you do For that repair you would need a Phillips screwdriver to take the stock off, a small flathead screwdriver to release the seal and of course a new seal. First take the magazine out and remove the gas tube endcap along with any CO2 canister that can be inside. Then undo 3 Phillips screws at the bottom of the stock. And remove the stock completely. You will see a cutout at the base of the gastube that would give you access to the piercing valve.

<http://iluvlocalplaces.com/images/c5683a-manual.pdf>

There is a round nut screwed into the valve body that holds the seal and the piercer together. Use a small flathead screwdriver to rotate that nut counterclockwise to screw it out. Once the nut is out you should get the access to the seal that you can gently pick with your small flathead screwdriver. You can see the difference between the new seal on the left and the old one on the right. The old one has a definite crack across the top side. If you have accidentally removed the piercer and the particle filter, here is the sequence in which those should go back from left to right. First insert the particle filter and make sure that it sits nice and flat. Then drop your piercer in and sit it properly as well. After that you should place your new seal flat on top of the piercer. Then you can position the fixing nut on top of the whole assembly and gently rotate it with you small flathead screwdriver, so it would settle into the thread properly. Make sure that you do not crossthead it. First couple of turns should go with ease. Do not gorillatighten that nut. You should be able to see the start of the thread above it, but that about all. Once the piercing valve is assembled you can put the stock back on and test your gun by inserting a new CO2 canister. Please remember to point your rifle in a safe direction when testfiring it and then lock it in your safe once you are finished. Safe and happy shooting.
